

The Dean of Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences followed up “The project for making greater earning to local according to the concept of sufficiency economy”

Assistant Professor Dr. Nipon Sasithornsavapa, the Dean of Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, went to the field for following up community services project, “The project for making greater earning to local according to the concept of sufficiency economy” on 22nd July, 2019 at Ban Khlong Bang Khae, Moo.4, Bang Nang Li Sub-district, Amphawa, Samut Songkhram. Project participants have got together to cultivate Phoenix mushrooms for consuming and also sold their products to markets. They produced sun-dried mushroom and fermented mushroom that made them earn more. The project highly satisfied all the participants.

Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences organized this community service project to create knowledge transfer about mushroom cultivation for Ban Khlong Khae Community. The purpose is promoting the creation of skills and knowledge about the profession to be self-reliant and strong community according to the concept of sufficiency economy.

